Robert Bingham, of Bingham School, N. C., (Bingham School P. O.), In the Interest of National Aid to Education [From the Proceedings of the Superintendents Department of the National Educational Association, Washington, D. C., February 15th, 1884.] President Butcher then introduced Major Robert Bingham, of Bingham School, North Carolina, who addressed the meeting as follows, on The Educational Status and Needs of the New South. Mr. President - Ladies and Gentlemen: I appear before this highly cultured audience, composed almost entirely of Northern men and women, to tell of the educational status and needs of the South, and I wish you to understand distinctly that I am a Southern man, of Southern birth, of Southern blood, of Southern education, of Southern record, of Southern prejudices, if you will. I was a Confederate soldier. I saw the last sun rise on the army of Northern Virginia. I was one of Lee's 7,500 armed men at Appomattox Court-House, who never bowed the knee to any Baal, but fought to the bitter end. And it was a bitter end; but these bitter pangs were the birth pangs of the New South, which, though still in its swaddling bands, is greater and more powerful in some respects than the old South, and which will soon be greater and more powerful in all respects than the old South could ever have been. When the bitter end came we surrendered in good faith. We accepted the conditions, and having done Our Duty as we saw it in one direction, we laid down our arms and betook ourselves to repairing the wreck and ruin...
