The Labrador coast was made in a bitter wind and driving snow, and during an entire day we threaded our way as much by the sense of sound as by sight through a labyrinth of reefs. with Persistent V breakers on every side. Clearing these before dark, we then hauled off away from the coast, which we did not see distinctly until October 13 near Hebron. We ran into Hebron in the hope of obtaining some coal, of which we had only a few tons left, and to get water, which we were entirely out of. Unable to obtain any coal at Hebron, we burned some of the interior beams of the ship, and taking the inside passage, reached Nain, the capital of the Labrador Moravian Missionary settlements. Here some wood and a little blubber and coaldirt were obtained, with which, still following the inside route, we were able to reach Hopedale. The ship was now so light, all her coal being burned and no ballast in her, that she would not mind her helm in a stifi breeze. This, and the lateness of the season, the continuous stormy weather which we were experiencing, and the character of the coast which we had yet to navigate, determined me to wait here for the arrival of the mail-steamer, from which I hoped to obtain coal, utilizing the delay to get ballast and strengthen the rudder and calk the stern.again,...
